Community Outreach

Clallam and Jefferson Counties will use a variety of methods to reach out to the community with information about accessible voting, such as:

- Presentations: Upon request, provide presentations about accessible voting options to area service clubs, senior centers, and groups that can help communicate accessible voting information out to the disabled community.
- Press Releases: Include VAAC members and others who provide outreach to the disabled community in the distribution list for election-related press releases.
- Signage: During election time, provide signage to assisted living communities, churches, senior centers, WorkSource, and other organizations. Messages on the signage should include, “Remember to Vote”, “Ballots must be postmarked by Election Day - Mail your ballot early” and “Contact us for accessible voting options”. Be sure that the messaging does not make it sound like official drop boxes are placed there.
- Reader Boards: During election time, ask that agencies include “Remember to Vote – Mail your ballot early” messages on their reader boards.
- Website Links: Ask that other agencies include a link on their websites to our Accessible Voting webpages.
- Mailers: Look for opportunities to provide mailers about accessible voting and a supply of blank labels to other organizations, so that they can distribute our information to their mailing lists.
- Radio advertisement.

Online Ballot Marking Program

Any registered voter can use the online ballot marking program. Clallam and Jefferson Counties, along with many other Washington counties, use votewa.gov. Other Washington counties use other web sites to offer this service to their voters. Voters with disabilities can mark their choices online, print their ballot, sign the declaration on the return envelope and return it to the election department either by mail or in a drop box.

Implementation of the Provisions of HAVA

The VAAC committee will continue to advise the Auditor’s Offices on how to make voting more accessible to the disabled community; assists the Auditor’s Offices in communicating with voters in the disabled community; and helps the Auditor’s Offices to inform voters in the disabled community and educate staff on disability issues.

Training in Respectful Communication

Clallam County has a manual on Diversity Sensitivity Training which all have read and are encouraged to review annually.

Jefferson County employees are required to participate in Diversity Sensitivity Training every two years.

Disability Awareness Starts Here (DASH) and Jefferson County Council of the Blind (JCCB) will offer training to community and county employees on disability issues.

Identify areas where people with disabilities can participate by assisting in the process as workers.

Clallam and Jefferson County hire extra help for elections through a normal county hiring process which encourages those with disabilities and minorities to apply.
